SECURE CONDOM

AESTRACT

a condor, of special design that will prevent said condom from coming off accidentally during sexual intercourse, said condom accomplishing this hy naving an area from the open end of said condom extending to within approximately two inches from the closed end of said condom of smaller circumferance than the male members shaft that it will fit, said area will be small enough in circumferance that it will take a small amount of effort to remove said condom over the head of said male member, said condom will require an installation ring of durable aut material such as hard plastic or other similar material, said installation ring will have a hole thru the center of large enough circumferance that the head of the male member that said installation ring fits will enter easily, said ring will have a groove on the outside circumferance large enough to hold said area of small circumferance rolled up and stretched upon to said installation ring, said groove will have one side of larger circumferance than the other side of said groove to prevent said area of smaller circumferance from being rolled off said installation ring in the wrong direction, said condor will have an erlarged area extending from the closed end of said condor for a distance of approximately two inches, such enlarged area being of larger circumferance than the head of the male member said condon will fit which will give the user the sensation of not having a condon installed, said condoms will come rolled up onto said installation ring with said enlarged area extending thru said installation ring, said condoms will be packaged in water scluable lubricant, said lutricant will also enhanse the natural sersation of not and having a condor installed, said lubricant can be used on said secure condoms since there is no worry of said secure condoms coming off accidentally